THE borough is to get a share of a £1.26 million pot from NHS England to help with its work in bringing together local health and care services into one efficient and effective organisation.

It has been recognised for its work to promote co-ordinated care, where health professionals and care workers liaise closely to provide joined-up support for patients and service users.

Royal Greenwich is one of 14 'pioneer' areas nationally, which will each receive £90,000. The money will be used to bring in relevant support to make integration happen more quickly and effectively.

Initiatives include a multi-disciplinary Joint Emergency Team (JET) which coordinates urgent social care referrals and helps prevent unnecessary hospital admissions.

The aim is to make sure that patients who could be treated at home or in short term residential care homes do not have to go into hospital unnecessarily. More than 2,000 patient admissions have already been avoided because of JET's involvement. More than £1 million has already been saved by

Memorial rose thief is so harsh

I HOPE the person who stole my roses from my son and daughter's memorial plaque on Christmas Eve and on May 22 reads this letter and feels some remorse. I doubt it, people who do this sick thing have no feelings at all. It was so upsetting for my family, especially when it happened twice. We did speak to one of the workers at the Falconwood Crematorium and he said it does happen. Well let's hope that what goes around comes around. And they will know how it feels. Losing two of our children is painful enough without this sort of thing happening.

Mrs J Mann, Eltham

Trees cut down without telling me

I HAVE lived in an apartment on the ground for more than eight years and there is a wooden fence around my front windows, for privacy, where inside there were four trees. Now, only tree ends are left and one is a Hazelnut that I planted myself seven years ago. It is big and should be cut, but they were cut inside the wooden fence without my knowledge. This happened before May 20 when I was away. With global warming and weather changes, we need more trees, not less. The Government also encourages environmental protection. Many people tell me this tree vandalism and intrusion into the property. I am very upset, I do not think it right for the council to do this to their tenants and their environment.

Jerald Leung, Greenwich

● A spokesperson for the council said: "The council will only cut down trees that present a hazard or have the potential to cause structural damage due to the close proximity of a building. This was the case here. Where tree removal is unavoidable every endeavour is made to replace the trees elsewhere in the locality. The trees were on a communal area and while we accept that some of the residents may have fenced in parts of that area they are not considered to be private gardens. Nevertheless we would like to apologise to Mr Leung for any distressed caused and for the oversight in not informing Mr Leung"

Poundland store is still there

I THINK you may get a protest from Poundland (GT front page of May 27) for stating that they "used to be" on the former Co-op site. It still is a popular and busy shop and I hope that people are not put off by thinking it has now closed. I hope they are staying in the town centre.

Leslie Oakley, Eltham

● A spokesperson for the council said: "Thanks – and apologies for the lack of clarity in the article, which should have said the site was formerly occupied by Co-op and is now occupied by Poundland. The council has bought the site and has planning permission for a new cinema complex as the article explained."

Lots in common

POWER OF THE PEOPLE:
residents of all ages
join in the fun

FUN and games were the order of the day when a get-together for families was held at the Woolwich Common Community Centre in Leslie Smith Square.

It was organised jointly by the centre and the Woolwich Common Tenants' and Residents' Association. Attractions included a drum-beating parade, face painting, Chinese dancing, Indian head and shoulder massage, plus stalls, arts and crafts. Also taking part were the FACE group, which works with women suffering domestic violence, the police, Charlton Athletic, and the council's waste management and sustainability teams. Guests included the Mayor of Royal Greenwich, Cllr Angela Cornforth, and other councillors. "It was a great family day out for all," said Lucy Isaiah, chair of the tenants' and residents' association. "The next stage is for the community centre in partnership with the association to work with other stakeholders and service providers to bring in services and activities to the community's doorstep. By doing so, and working with the council, people will have their voices and ideas heard."

It was an honour to serve you

THIS will be the last edition of Greenwich Time to be published whilst I am leader of the council. Having decided to leave politics and not contest the last local elections, it is time for me to do something else. It was a real pleasure to lead my party for a fourth successful set of local elections before passing the baton to my successor, Denise Hyland. She will be the first woman to lead the borough and I wish her all the best for the future. We've seen many changes and improvements to the borough during the past 14 years, as evidenced by the findings of many external independent assessors. During my time, I kept repeating two well known phrases to myself: "We will leave this place better than when we found it" and "Make no small plans, for they have no power to stir men's souls". I have always been extremely ambitious for Greenwich and its people. The long decline of our former industrial employment base left a poverty of aspiration and an underlying lack of confidence in so many of our people. It is why things like the hosting of the Olympic Games, the pursuit of Crossrail and the securing of Royal Borough status were all important. We've had the Tour de France, the Red Bull air race and Tall ships but also never lost sight of the basics. Improving our schools, freeing Council Tax and buying extra police officers have all been part of the agenda. And our ambitious regeneration plans have brought jobs, secured transport links and delivered billions of pounds of investment which enhance life and opportunities in the borough and beyond. But inevitably there are good and terrible moments I will take away. Like you, I shared in the pride of our hosting of the Olympic Games and our accession to Royal Borough status. The morning of Friday 3 February 2012 when we attended the Throne Room in the House of Lords to receive the Letters Patent will be something I always carry with me. But one cannot escape the awful moments. The death of a child through neglect by its own parents is never comprehensible. Nor too, the tragic and brutal murder of Lee Rigby on our streets last year. It says much I believe about our borough that not for one moment did I worry that our communities would split apart over this. We are a far more resilient and united borough. So my final thanks to those I have worked with and alongside both within the council and beyond. I wish nothing but the best for this place which became my adopted home more than 30 years ago. My special thanks to all the people of the Royal Borough of Greenwich. It really was an honour to serve you.

A dose of the right medicine

A RAFT of measures are under way to improve urgent health care services in the borough.

It follows support from local GPs and other Clinical Commissioning Group (CCG) members who want to make it easier for people to receive urgent care.

Doctors, the council and more than 1,300 residents gave their views in a three-month 'Right Care First Time' consultation exercise.

Greenwich CCG has agreed plans to:

- Test new ways of providing appointments in GP practices

- Find out how many people are not registered with a GP and why, and to promote registering to improve access to health services

- Join up the Greenwich out-of-hours GP service and the GP-led urgent care centre at Queen Elizabeth Hospital

Woolwich GP Dr Hany Wahba, who is chair of NHS Greenwich CCG, said: "We are extremely grateful to Greenwich residents for taking part in the consultation, sharing their views and helping to shape our decision-making.

"Patients' views are the guiding influence in our decision-making and our decisions mean that when a Greenwich resident has an illness or injury that isn't life-threatening but needs urgent attention, he or she is treated quickly by their own GP or at a GP-led urgent care centre that is open early and closes late.

Urgent care centres provide treatment for any illnesses or injuries which aren't life threatening, but still need treating quickly.

In Greenwich, the CCG works with the local NHS, including hospitals, mental health providers, pharmacists and dentists as well as the council, local community groups, public and patients, to improve health and wellbeing, reduce health inequalities, and ensure everyone has equal access to the health services.

A healthy bonus

joining up health and social care services.

Greenwich's integrated system has already won honours in national awards which promote innovation in the public sector and recognise improvement and efficiency in social care.

A key feature of the system is that it allows people to be cared for in the community rather than in hospital. This care may be provided in their own homes or in intermediate care facilities until they can return home. The aim is to give people time and support to regain their independence wherever they can.

Successes for the new ways of working include:

- Patients aged over 65 being discharged from hospital more quickly
- A smaller number of people going to Accident and Emergency or being admitted to hospital

- Fewer service users needing home care.

- It has also brought savings of £900,000 in the council's care budget, and saved more than five per cent in the NHS community health budgets.

The scheme is now being expanded to develop integrated health and social care services centred around GP surgeries.

Local GP Dr Rebecca Rosen, and a member of the commissioning group which led on developing integrated services, said: "As a GP in Greenwich, I am very excited about how the Pioneer project enables me to work much more closely with colleagues from the health, social care and voluntary sectors.

"It is also refreshing that the work we're doing in Greenwich is centred around service users' goals and ambitions. This extra money will enable us to be more innovative in how we help people with both medical and non-medical needs."

Roadshow to give lifestyle tips on reducing the risk of cancer

have the chance to talk to Cancer Research nurses about improving their lifestyle to reduce the risk of cancer.

Each year in the UK, about 309,500 people are diagnosed with cancer, but experts estimate that more than four in 10 cases could be prevented by lifestyle changes, such as being active, eating healthily and taking care to protect your skin against the sun.

Dr Ellen Wright, a local GP from Greenwich Clinical Commissioning Group, said: "It's really important that residents understand and are aware of the ways to reduce the risks of cancer through living healthy lifestyles, as well as the importance of seeing your GP early with any concerns."

Share and square

by Dick Townsend-Smith

New Greenwich shared ownership homes for sale

THE latest council-supported development to help people get on the home-owning ladder has just put its shared ownership homes on sale.

They're part of the Greenwich Square regeneration project on the site of the old Greenwich District Hospital.

A total of 645 new homes are being built, including 144 available for shared ownership and 170 for social rent. These affordable homes represent almost half the development and were secured by Greenwich Council as a planning condition. Home hunters will be able to buy a 25 per cent share from £73,750.

The first phase of the development is due to be finished in July.

It will include the new royal borough Greenwich Centre, a community facility that will provide a gymnasium, swimming pools, council services, a library and a medical practice, plus flexible space for community use.

At the heart of the development is a public square that has been designed to create a community hub which will be surrounded by cafes, restaurants and other amenities.

The new homes within this part of the development will range from apartments and maisonettes with balconies to terraced family houses with landscaped gardens.

The affordable homes will be available through L&Q, one of the UK's largest housing associations.

Jerome Geoghegan, its director for development and sales, said: "London is currently facing an affordability crisis, with many first-time buyers priced out of the market."

"Greenwich Square is an important development for Londoners, not only because of its iconic location, size and facilities, but also because it offers people across a range of incomes the opportunity to be part of this dynamic new quarter right from the start."

A spokesperson for the council said: "This is one of a number of exciting developments in Royal Greenwich which are transforming areas with large scale regeneration programmes. This development will also see the third of our new local centres opening; the Greenwich Centre will deliver a more efficient service for local residents by opening brand new community facilities housed in one modern building."

"We expect it to follow the success of our centres in Eltham and Woolwich; for example, our new Woolwich library is now one of the busiest in London."

Queen's award for housing advice group

A VOLUNTEER group which gives legal advice to people with housing problems or who are facing homelessness has received recognition in the Queen's Birthday Honours list.

Reps from Greenwich Housing Rights will attend a garden party at Buckingham Palace today (Tuesday) to celebrate receiving the Queen's Award for Voluntary Service.

Just over 100 charities nationally received the accolade, created in 2002 to reward groups of volunteers.

GHR have been running for 25 years, training people to help others when they face housing problems.

They help when they appear at Woolwich and Lewisham courts over housing issues. Citations from two district judges helped GHR earn the accolade.

GHR offer specialist advice on a wide range of housing and related problems, to individuals and others who provide housing services.

MAJOR employers including the Royal Borough of Greenwich are offering health checks and advice for their male employees as part of Men's Health Week.

It's running from June 9 to 15 and the council is teaming up with Children's Centres, health groups, community organisations and local employers to run activities across Greenwich.

This year Men's Health Week focuses on health and work, including stress and unemployment. Other employers offering health checks include construction firm Wilmott Dixon.

A weekly Men's Health group – established following last year's Men's Health Week – meets on Tuesday nights at Valley Central in Charlton Athletic's Valley stadium. The group offers exercise sessions and social activities - such as pool and the occasional Charlton game - as well as talks and discussions on issues such as heart disease, prostate cancer and healthy eating.

Men are welcome to call in at Valley Central on a Tuesday evening 7.30pm to 9.15pm or contact Mark Baker on 07896 103948; email mark.baker@cact.org.uk

A major event during the week is the World Cup themed five-a-side football tournament at Charlton Athletic's training ground, in Sparrow's Lane, New Eltham.

Sixteen teams will battle it out on Friday (June 13) from 5.30pm. The winners will receive a replica World Cup trophy.

Other groups offering men the chance to talk about health include:

TfL axes cash fares on buses

PEOPLE travelling by bus will no longer be able to pay by cash from Sunday, July 6.

Transport for London (TfL) says axing the method of payment on the capital's buses will save £130 million a year, which will be reinvested into the transport network.

Passengers will have to use an Oyster card or contactless payment card (CPC) to pay as you go.

TfL says nine out of ten cash payers already have an Oyster card and their main reasons for using cash are because their card has run out of credit or they have simply forgotten it.

A new scheme, called the One More Journey facility, lets passengers with insufficient funds but positive balances on their Oyster card make one more trip.

After a successful trial on the most cash-used routes, it is now being rolled-out across London.

By summer virtually everyone in London and the South East who has a credit or debit card will have at least one CPC-enabled card.

Big plants are music to Tim's ears

TELEVISION antiques expert Tim Wonnacott met students Nora Malakauskaite and Velizar Kirilov from Corelli College, Blackheath, when he visited this year's Chelsea Flower Show.

The college had been asked to supply plants for the show for the fourth year in a row. This year their entry had a musical theme.

Students had been studying the effect of vibrations from music on plant growth.

They composed a piece of classical music based on Tchaikovsky's Romeo and Juliet and used it alongside indie, rock, hip-hop and pop to test the theory that music can benefit plant growth.

The classical piece of music produced greener and larger plants.

Teacher Tracy Nutton said: "Once again the students' hard work and dedication has paid off."

"It makes me feel proud to be able to work with our students on such an amazing project."

"Even though they don't all get a chance to attend the show, they all try their best and give up a lot of their time."

"The show is a great way to inspire them and let them talk about their achievements with people who share their passion and love for gardening."

Boom time for rhyme times

by Ian Lamont

WEEKLY attendances at baby rhyme time sessions in libraries across the borough have never been bigger.

The groups, suitable for babies and toddlers up to three years old, are part of a programme of story times aimed at young children which have been running for more than a decade.

Two years ago, they were revamped and expanded and the number of activities doubled to stretch across all 12 libraries.

Now about 600 children, and their parents or carers, attend weekly across 26 regular sessions.

The most popular is at the Woolwich Centre Library, where attendances have been known to top more than 100.

Many libraries have more than one session each week, they are spread across mornings and afternoons, as well as Saturdays. Sessions are free and there is no need to book.

Liz Green, from Charlton, took her granddaughter Chloe, aged 18 months, to a recent session in Woolwich.

"We have Chloe one day a week and I have a list of baby rhyme times up at home. We pop on the bus and come here, depending on the day we have her.

"She enjoys it and loves singing. As soon as she arrives she understands what to do and knows its fun.

"It's very well attended and very well organised."

Anu Sharma, who lives in Blackheath, has been attending sessions for about two years with twins Sagar and Sanjna, aged three. Anu, who works three days a week,

Library closure

PLUMSTEAD library has been closed for works after part of a ceiling collapsed. The royal borough is carrying out an investigation after the incident on May 29 and is arranging temporary provision including a mobile library every afternoon and on Saturdays. Updates at www.better.org.uk/libraries/areas/greenwich said: "We come mostly on Thursdays and it's good fun, nice singing and a chance to meet people and read stories.

"We also [go to libraries] when they do messy plays and crafts. Sometimes we go to the park but when it's raining it's definitely the library."

The youngsters even have the chance to join together for the annual Rhymeathon, held in July in cooperation with the borough's children's services, when more than 300 children plus their carers take part in a mass sing-song.

Diana Edmonds, head of libraries at Greenwich Leisure Limited, which runs them on behalf of the borough, said: "Baby Rhyme Times are a great way of helping children acquire language skills and introduce babies and toddlers to the library in a friendly and welcoming way.

"They also encourage the development of social skills in young children, as well as providing a safe environment for parents and carers to meet and interact, while providing the repertoire of various songs and games the child is likely to be expected to know when they attend more formal education."

About two million visits are paid to borough libraries each year.

The borough's libraries hold 75,000 children's books and supply 2,500 library members aged 0-3 and more than 16,500 aged 4-12.

They also provide a variety of facilities for local residents including DVDs, free public access computers and Wi-Fi, alongside creative activities such as messy mornings, reading groups and 'knit and natter' sessions for adults.

There is no need to book, just go along and join in the free sessions.

AS scores of residents enjoy PARKSfest, organisers behind the event are inviting residents to go of their green spaces by becoming a friend of their local park. Dick Townsend-Smith finds out

Pleasure park

THIS year's Parksfest is now in full swing, with thousands of local people enjoying the host of events taking place in the borough's parks and open spaces over the summer months.

But behind the scenes, the borough's 24 thriving Friends of Parks groups work all year round to make sure Royal Greenwich's glorious green spaces are not just protected and maintained, but also developed so they can be enjoyed by the whole community.

Terry Powley, chair of the Friends of Parks Forum, said: "This is the sixth year of Parksfest, and anyone who attends will see for themselves how valuable a contribution the unrivalled parks of Greenwich make to its cultural and community life. The Friends are groups of enthusiastic people who are keen to keep and preserve the amenities of our parks. They meet regularly to discuss safeguarding and developing individual parks, and often set up work parties to tidy up the parks or plant bulbs, and introduce interesting projects."

He continued: "The Friends of The Tarn, for example, have installed cameras in birds' nests to give them an insight to how birds hatch and nurture their young. The Avery Hill Friends are interested in bat watching, and are working on identifying different species."

So what do people who join a Friends group get out of it? Terry explained: "They all share a common interest in open spaces and environment protection. And being a member introduces you to other people with the same interests, so there is a social dimension as well. The Friends groups have moved on from just protecting the parks to developing them so that people can use them for events and enjoyable entertainment."

Friends. They can help with setting up a new group, for example by hosting a public meeting. Currently new Friends groups are proposed for Bostall Gardens in Abbey Wood and Queenscroft Recreation Ground in Eltham. Depending on what people want, Friends groups can be either formal – with a management committee and constitution – or informal. They can apply for community grants to help improve their park or open space, and Friends groups can also contribute their views to the borough's Parks Management plans. They may also be able to put on public events in their local park.

"We work very closely with the council, who are very supportive of what we do, and plant trees and develop meadows, such as at Oxleas and Horn Park. The Parks Forum is pleased it has been able to work with the council in recent years on installing the outdoor gyms and lots of playground equipment, and they always seek our views before new equipment is installed," Terry added.

At the time The Tarn was rather neglected and there was quite a bit of anti-social behaviour so many people were not keen to visit as they felt it was rather isolated and threatening. ownership of their local neighbourhood. Friends of the Tarn have been holding PARKSfest events since the outset and these have been very well received by the local community." Twinkle Park Trust co-ordinator Carol Kenna said: "Twinkle Park Trust lease both Twinkle Park and Charlotte Turner Gardens from Royal Greenwich and have refurbished the two public spaces in collaboration with local people. The people on the trust work as volunteers for our annual activities and look after the parks in collaboration with Greenwich's parks department and Cleansweep. "Without their involvement, interest and fun the level of improvements and use of the parks would not be possible and the trust hopes it has helped the parks to become the centre of our community." Marg Kearey joined the group a year ago to represent residents living close to Twinkle Park. She said: "With developments rapidly taking place close by it is really important to me to be involved in airing concerns and suggesting ideas from a grass roots base. It is also a great opportunity to meet other concerned people and talk about issues we take seriously in an informal and friendly manner." Janet Thompson from Horn Park Friends said: "Encouraging people to use the park is really important. It's a shared resource and I like helping to look after it. The Friends group provides both practical opportunities and a channel of communication with Parks and Open Spaces at the borough".

Artists open their doors to the public

INSIDE VIEW: Residents will have the chance to see inside artist studios

SCULPTURES, paintings and artwork made of felt will be on display over the next two weekends when artists open their doors to the public, in an annual event.

Greenwich Open Studios will give people the chance to see 23 local artists on an 'art trail' around the royal borough.

"It is the oldest group to set up this idea of open studios in an artists trail," said event co-ordinator Maggie Learmonth, who paints with an environmental theme.

"It began in 1977 with a group who just got themselves together to display their art and has been going ever since. We have 50 members and 23 will be opening their studios or front rooms."

Fearing nobody would find her studio tucked away remotely in Charlton, Maggie will be using her front room, something which has brought her great success.

"I've been doing it five or six years and once someone was knocking on my door the minute I was open, rushed in and said 'Oh good, you haven't sold that painting yet!'"

"People come for all different reasons, some to buy and some just to do the trail. Some pick and choose and others try to see as much as they can."

The art is varied: Nicola Corrigan is a designer who makes textiles, cards, murals, wall art and designs for interiors; Kathy Drake is a sculptor, Jade Jones is a propmaker and paper collage artist, Elaine Marshall specialises in etching and relief printmaking, Rob Mills is a musician and artist. The artists also take part in occasional joint exhibitions.

The Greenwich Open Studios art trail takes place on June 14-15 and 21-22.

Children's theatre company Page One will be tucking you in for their latest production Made Up Stories From My Unmade Bed.

Free performances are on June 21 and 22 and they promise to delight both the young and the young at heart.

Made Up Stories From My Unmade Bed has been specifically created for open air performances, using Page One's signature style of new writing, poetry, puppetry and devising.

It centres on a young girl and her dreams which escape her head and come to life engaging the audience in the adventures around her bed.

During the process, the street will be transformed: pillows will become clouds and beds will be boats as the sheets billow above, inviting you into a world of colour, puppets, feathers and fun.

Page One's artistic director, Chloe Stephens, said: "We're very excited to be creating a highly visual performance to engage new audiences in outdoor spaces. The audience will be taken on a journey through the girls' dreams; falling, running and flying around the space with pillows, sheets, explosions of feathers, shoals of fish and dancing penguins."

The theatre group is well known for its inspirational theatrical experiences and for staging accessible and innovative theatre with universal appeal and there will be performances at the Lyric in Hammersmith, the Watford Palace Theatre and the Latitude Festival throughout the summer.

The Greenwich + Docklands International Festival (GDIF) is London's biggest festival of outdoor theatre and performing arts and is part of the Royal Greenwich Festivals, a programme of summer arts events.

Photos from the dark (room) age

OLD STYLE: The Final Print Group exhibitors

I WAS so intrigued by the idea of an exhibition showing pictures produced through the old fashioned method of films and dark rooms, I had to pop along. Ten intrepid and adventurous amateur photographers from the Final Print Group are running an exhibition of their work at the first floor café bar of the Greenwich Picture House. What hit me first was the richness and diversity of the images on show, ranging from classic Film Noir such as Greenwich Foot Tunnel by Amanda Binks, to breathtaking shots such as Storm Cloud near the Arctic by Fergus Morley.

A more diverse showing was by Susan Gregory with her fantastic Boat on Roof and then a wonderful modern day take of a 50s to 70s classic camera image, Greenwich in Polaroid.

A more modern day approach was taken by Jacky Cribb with a very unusual view of the O2 and Lucy Stubbs risked life and limb cementing a reminder of Woolwich before its complete regeneration with View from a Window.

Everywhere I looked something caught my eye with intrigue, comedy and fascination. When I asked what their inspiration was I was informed that their tutor at Greenwich Community College, which has one of the few remaining professional dark rooms in South East London, gave them all assignments designed to take them out of their individual comfort zones and push themselves.

Well, it worked, with all the Final Print Group producing a showing they can be justly proud of.

The exhibition is free and is on until the end of June.

Under the conditions of your tenancy agreement, you have a responsibility to leave your property in an acceptable state of repair. We may visit you to check this. If we consider your property is in an unacceptable condition, you may be prevented from moving or be recharged for work.

To avoid getting an unwelcome bill, follow these rules:

- Make sure your garden is not overgrown and you have cleared all garden waste.
- Clear all your items from the inside and the outside of the property. This includes any loft space, external cupboards or sheds.
- Return all the keys to the Royal Borough's offices no later than midday on Monday (or Tuesday if it is a Bank Holiday). You will be charged a further week's rent if you do not return your keys on time.

If you leave repairs that are your responsibility, or items that require disposal you will be charged the cost of this work.

Gaelic footballers beat the Irish at their own game

A TEAM made up of pupils from two schools in the royal borough has taken on the Irish at their own game and won.

And later this month a squad of 20 boys go back to Ireland to contest the national Division Three U14 title in gaelic football.

The group are made up of 16 boys from St Paul's Academy in Abbey Wood and four from St Thomas More, Eltham.

They recently went to Killeavy, in South Armagh, for a seven-day trip and returned with two trophies, having won a league and a cup.

One of their coaches, Michael Maher who teaches at St Paul's, said: "The headteacher Pat Winston is from an Irish background, as am I, and we have a lot of Irish staff."

"Our gaelic football has grown from strength to strength and we've got it now in many of the primary schools that feed us. The game is going from strength to strength in London"

Abbey Wood have teams at several levels, including U18s, but the biggest competition in Ireland is for U14s.

The squad have been hugely successful, winning two divisions of the Irish Feile Peile Na Nog contest in recent years to move up to division three. "I don't think we will be far off winning it this year," said Mr Maher. "I feel this is the strongest squad we've ever had."

"When we set it up it was really to get the boys over to Ireland for a weekend."

"It's a huge part of our school culture and the lads love it because it is something different."

"When we went over just before half-term the lads stayed with local families and they were made to feel so welcome. Everyone seemed to know them and they were celebrities for a week. It's all part of building their self-esteem."

Played 15-a-side, the schools concentrate on the sport after the football season has ended, using the similar skills built up with the same size ball.

The boys' efforts in gaelic football featured on London Live, the capital's new TV station, at the weekend.

Killeavy were impressed with their visitors, writing on their website: "These were big, strong lads who were well skilled in the arts of Gaelic football and blew away opposition from St Colman's school, Silverbridge, St Patrick's, Lordship and our own U14 team... they won them all fairly convincingly."

Ellis takes a step towards Rio Olympics while Reggie's boxing goes from strength to strength

The O'Reillys are flying

by Ian Lamont

ELLIS O'Reilly has moved a step closer to realising her dream of competing at the Olympic Games in Rio - after a testing time in Bulgaria.

The 16-year-old gymnast, supported by Greenwich Starting Blocks, helped Ireland's gymnastics team finish 19th at the European Championships in Bulgaria.

That was good enough to qualify for the World Championships in China later this year, where the quest to qualify for the Olympics in Brazil in 2016 continues.

Ellis, from New Eltham, had to sit some of her GCSEs while in Bulgaria - and then sit another in a late-night session at her school the moment she got off the plane home.

Mum Jackie said: "They had to take her mobile phone off her so that she didn't have any contact from her friends, who sat exams at different times to when she could."

"We couldn't speak to her or contact her either, so it was all really difficult for her."

Despite the distractions and the exam pressure, Ellis finished 25th overall of those who did all four gymnastic disciplines.

It was the first time she had competed as a senior at that level and she was up against older and more experienced

STRONG PROGRESS: Reggie O'Reilly has won four of his first five fights gymnasts who had already competed at the Olympics and World Championships. Ireland, for whom Ellis qualifies through her grandfather, were also putting in a team to the Europeans for the first time.

Ellis is one of four siblings, three of whom are boxers led by Jenna, 18, who is due to take part in the Haringay Box Cup at Alexandra Palace this summer.

Jenna, also supported by Starting Blocks, will also now be competing as a senior against seasoned adult boxers, with potential opponents in her category coming from Scotland and Germany.

Meanwhile youngest sibling Reggie, 11, has made great strides in his own boxing career, winning four of his first five bouts.

Having begun to fight only recently, he won his first three bouts comprehensively.

He lost a fourth when he prepared to fight against a left-hander, only to find his opponent right handed, before winning again for his club, Nemesis, in a contest in Romford.

Jackie said: "His coaches are really pleased with him. They say whatever he tells them to do he takes it in and ignores the calls from the crowd. He works really hard in training."

Reggie added: "I'm pleased with how it's going. I am working on how to box against southpaws [left handers] because I'm going to come across them soon."

Saying what attracted him to the sport, he added: "I just liked all the training - the sparring and the running."
